Anatomy

1. Overlay Tissue

The overlay tissue is the most important layer of a laminate. Yet, many laminate manufacturers skip this step to save on manufacturing costs. This results in laminates with patchy and uneven surface colouration. All our laminates are topped with a high quality overlay tissue that allow the laminates to resist super high abrasion of more than 1,100 cycles. Comparatively, the common industry standard of abrasion resistance is only at 300 to 500 cycles. Our imported overlay tissue also provides a protective layer that prevents all kinds of staining, and a resistance to basic chemicals that comes regular cleaning. The result is a laminate that will retain its colour, pattern and design even after years of heavy usage.

2. Decor Paper

The designs, prints and patterns that you see on our laminates are all thanks to the decor paper, which are imported specially from Europe and infused with melamine resins. The designs are produced by some of the world's best printers, promising the trendiest looks with highly intricate details. Our design team puts in the care and dedication to curate a collection of decor papers that cater to every possibility, ranging from perennial favourites to future classics.

3. Barrier Paper

Unlike most suppliers, we applies a layer of high quality barrier paper between the Kraft paper and the decor paper. This integral addition enhances the brightness and sharpness of the design, as it ensures that the Kraft paper is not visible through the other layers. As such, there is absolutely no shadow effect, which can otherwise be seen on lighter coloured designs.

4. Kraft Paper

We use A++ Grade Kraft paper that sets us apart from many other laminate manufacturers. This final layer ensures that our laminates are outstandingly durable, exceptionally sturdy and can withstand the rigours of time.
